Respecting Others

What are good manners?

- Good manners are about respecting others and ourselves!
- Some examples of good manners are:
 - Using “please” and “thank-you”
 - Waiting your turn in line
 - Asking to use other’s property
 - Sharing with others
 - Helping others
 - Using kind words

What are bad manners?

- Bad manners are when we do not respect ourselves and others.
- Some examples of bad manners are:
 - Pushing others in line
 - Yelling at others to get out of our way
 - Not helping others who need our help
 - Not using the words “please” and “thank-you”

What's the difference between good and bad manners?

- When we use good manners we are making other's feel good about themselves. We are showing others that we respect them. When using the word's "please" and "thank-you", it shows others that we are thankful for what they are doing for us.
- When we use bad manners we are not being kind or respectful to others. Others may become upset or angry at us for not treating them with respect.
